The Compact Disc Interactive System brings a new experience to television: interactive programming using digital video and superior sound reproduction that audiences have come to expect from the Compact Disc medium. In using CD-i discs, viewers will operate a remote controller for three basic functions:

- Cursor movement Allows the viewer at designated times to position the cursor anywhere on the screen to select a programme activity, or in any other way select an active zone or object on the screen.
- Action Button One Identified by one dot •, this button is used to initiate a given programme activity selected by the cursor.
- Action Button Two Identified by two dots • •, this button may either duplicate the functions of Action Button One or offer additional functionality.

To locate the cursor and action buttons on your remote controller, please refer to the Instruction Manual of your CD-i player. Please note: functions may vary according to the title played. For more information, you may select special "Help" programs available on most CD-i titles.

In storing and handling your CD-i programme, you should apply the same care as with conventional Compact Discs. No further cleaning is necessary if the Compact Disc is always held by the edges and is replaced in its case directly after playing. Should your CD-i disc display artifacts or playback problems, please remove it from the player and wipe it with a clean and lint-free, soft, dry cloth, always in a straight line from centre to edge. No solvent or abrasive cleaner should ever be used on the disc.
